The bill passed a vote in Hungary's parliament on Tuesday, with 123 MPs voting for and 38 MPs voting in opposition. It will require CEU to open a new campus in the United States, mandate that CEU change the name under which it operates, and eliminate an agreement that allows faculty and staff from non-European countries to work at CEU without work permits. The bill requires the governments of the US and Hungary to agree on new terms for the university's operations within the next few months. The Guild of Industrial, Commercial and Institutional Accountants (I.C.I.A.) - Canada

The Guild of Industrial, Commercial and Institutional Accountants was the first professional body to recognise St Clements University Bachelor of Accounting degrees for membership. St Clements Education Group Accounting graduates are encouraged to join this group.

The Guild of Industrial, Commercial and Institutional Accountants (I.C.I.A.) is an association of business accountants, financial managers, tax preparers and accounting executives with members in every province of Canada as well as many other parts of the world. The Guild was founded in 1956 and incorporated by Federal Charter in 1961. It promotes and supports interest in vocational accountancy; encourages acceptance of modern methods and procedures and gives recognition to the individual's skills and practical experience.

Guild is a term used to describe an association for mutual aid in a common pursuit. The initials I.C.I.A. are the first letters of our official name - Industrial, Commercial & Institutional Accountants. On acceptance, either as an Accredited Member or an Associate Member, you will receive an appropriate certificate.

The Guild publishes a regular newsletter known as the Journal, presently published quarterly and mailed to all members.

If your career is in accounting or management, then membership in the Guild should be a priority. Canadian business is becoming ever more complex. Consequently, the importance of the accountant is increasing significantly. Growth, diversification and competition in today's business world all demand controls that only a competent accountant can provide. As a result, the present day accountant must be better trained and better informed than ever before. This is why membership in the Guild (or any professional association) can be of significant value.

The difference between an Associate and an Accredited Member is that there are two primary classes of membership. A student of a recognised curriculum in accounting or a related field is eligible for Associate Member status. A graduate of such a program who has completed the requisite practical work and administrative experience may be accepted as an Accredited Member of the Guild. Associate membership is also open to those who possess the basics of bookkeeping and general accounting skills, and are presently engaged in work of an accounting nature. On the other hand, Accredited membership is open to more experienced accountants with previous formal training and extensive practical and administrative experience. Accredited members may also use the designation I.C.I.A. after their name.

Positions members hold are usually determined by education and experience. Some Associate members are bookkeepers and accounting clerks whereas Accredited members generally hold positions such as Accountant/Office Manager, Cost Accountant, Comptroller, Treasurer, Internal Auditor, Budget Analyst, Financial Accountant and officer of a corporation. Many of their members are self-employed.
